FEELING IRISH

Magic Theatre's 1998/99 season concludes with the American premiere of Stones in His Pockets by Irish playwright Marie Jones. The story follows a Hollywood company's making of a film about Ireland, complete with rustic scenery and big-name star. But for two down-on-their-luck Irishmen working as extras on the shoot, the Ireland being staged for film contrasts sharply with the life they know firsthand.

Local actors Mark Phillips and Kurt Reinhardt portray multiple roles as the two friends create their own film version of Ireland, one quite different from the Hollywood fantasy. Both actors have appeared before at the Magic—Phillips in Sam Shepard's TrueWest, and Reinhardt in Paula Vogel's Baltimore Waltz. Stones in His Pockets made an unofficial debut at the recent Festival of Irish Women Playwrights, where it was well received by audiences and critics alike. The Bay Guardian called it "funny, touching, and richly theatrical."

Stones in His Pockets previews June 2 through 5, opens June 8, Tuesday at 8:30pm, and continues through July 3. Performances are Wednesday and Thursday at 8:30pm, Friday and Saturday at 8pm, and Sunday at 2:30pm. There is no performance Wednesday, June 5. Tickets are $18 for the previews, $32 on opening night and Saturdays, and $23 all other times. For information, call (415) 441-8822.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY, DUKE

One hundred years ago this year, jazz great Duke Ellington was born. In his 75 years, Ellington became one of the most famous American composers and songwriters. His works—from "Take the A Train" to his jazz arrangements of classical pieces such as Tchaikovsky's Nutcracker Suite—remain classics more than two decades after his death.

Among the local celebrations of the Ellington centennial is a two-day appearance by Oakland's Savage Jazz Dance Company. The Bay Area's only all-jazz dance company honors Ellington with a world premiere of works by Artistic Director Reginald Ray-Savage, set to the music of composer Marcus Shelby.

Local themes abound, most noticeably in Bay Bridge Suite, an homage to the "unique spirit of the people and pace of the Bay Area." Many other pieces are named after Ellington compositions, including Fragmented Pieces for a Piano and Bass, Sophisticated Ladies, The Swingers Jump, Track 360, and The Mooch.

Savage Jazz was founded in 1992 to promote this most American of musical forms. The company frequently holds performances and workshops in the Oakland public schools, and has appeared on numerous stages throughout the Bay Area. Last November, it played a sold-out weekend at San Francisco's Brady Street Theater.

Reginald Ray-Savage has been a member of several dance companies throughout the country, including the Katherine Dunham Dance Company, St. Louis Civic Ballet, the St. Louis Black Repertoire Dance Theater, Joe Hall Dance Company, Ruth Page Ballet Chicago, and San Francisco Dance Theater. He has taught jazz dance in the Bay Area for the past ten years. Composer Marcus Shelby has worked with Robert Moses and the Robert Henry Johnson Dance Company. His work has appeared in numerous movies, including John Singleton's Higher Learning, White Man's Burden, and Lenny Bruce.

The Savage Jazz Dance Company presents "An Ellington Celebration" June 25 and 26, Friday and Saturday at 8pm in the Cowell Theater. Tickets are $14 to $18. For information, call Fort Mason Ticket Service, (415) 441-FMTS.

COLOMBIANA

Since the 1960s, the Peña (gathering place) has been a fixture of Latin American societies. Started in Chile and Argentina, peñas became the focus of a community—a place to gather for singing, festivities, conversation, and feasts. This month, Fort Mason Center hosts the Third Peña Cultural Colombiana, a celebration of Colombian culture in its many incarnations—music, dance, art, and food.

Many local Colombian organizations participate with booths and tables; on exhibit are paintings and sculptures by Colombian artists.

The main theme, however, is a commemoration of the late choreographer and dancer Jaramillo Jacinto, who passed away recently. The program opens with a documentary about Jacinto made by video artist Mario Lamo. It describes the life and work of this forgotten genius, who introduced Isadora Duncan's School of Natural Movement to Latin America. After leaving his native country to work in Hollywood, he returned to Colombia to form his own dance troupe and explore his African and Indian roots.

Following the documentary the Colombian Ethnic Dance Project takes the stage under the direction of Bogotá-born Beatriz Restrepo. This local dance troupe performs a sampling of ethnic dances, including the well-known Cumbia and Mapalé, but also the Currulao, San Juanero, and Bambuco, plus many other colorful expressions of Colombia's diverse dance traditions. In a piece titled "El Mohan," the group recreates a popular legend of the Magdalena plains in an elegant combination of traditional and modern Colombian dance.

Colombian Ethnic Dance Project

The Colombian Ethnic Dance Project has been active in the Bay Area since 1996, giving more than 80 performances. It strives to maintain its grassroots origins while evolving into a professional dance company. Artistic Director Restrepo sums up her troupe's mission to fuse past and present by focusing on the possibility that "in the rituals of our ancestors we can see ourselves much more profoundly." Like Jacinto Jaramillo, she interweaves African rhythms and indigenous melodies to bring to life the rich culture of Colombia today.

The Third Peña Cultural Colombiana takes place June 27, Sunday at 6pm in the Cowell Theater. Tickets are $15, $12 for students, $8 for seniors and children 12 and younger. For information, call (415) 441-FMTS.

TAKE A CRUISE

Summertime heralds the return of many sea creatures to the Bay Area and the Pacific Ocean just outside the Golden Gate. The Oceanic Society, in its continuing role as public educator about the world's marine environments, offers boat tours to the Farallon islands leaving Fort Mason Center every weekend, from June through November.

The Society's 63-foot Coast Guard-certified vessel New Superfish can accommodate as many as 49 people, and sports an open-air observation deck and enclosed indoor salon. Tours head under the Golden Gate Bridge and towards the Farallon Islands National Wildlife Refuge—the largest seabird rookery in the eastern Pacific outside Alaska, with over a quarter-million avian inhabitants.

Tufted Puffin

Because of the upwelling of nutrient-rich water along the California coast, the Farallones host an amazing diversity of creatures. Nesting birds include Rhinoceros Auklets, Pigeon Guillemots, and Tufted Puffins, plus a teeming multitude of albatross, murres, oystercatchers, jaegers, cormorants, and shearwaters. Also calling these jagged, windswept islands home are populations of Steller's sea lions, harbor seals, California sea lions, northern elephant seals, and the occasional fur seal.

Many of the trips encounter endangered humpback whales—known for their mysterious songs—and blue whales, the largest animal that ever lived on Earth. Often, the boat is accompanied by bow-riding Dall's porpoises, by Pacific white-sided or Risso's dolphins, or the rare harbor porpoise.

The Oceanic Society is a naturalist organization that leads volunteer ecotours and research expeditions around the world. The Society works to involve local communities in preservation efforts, encouraging sustainable economic practices as an alternative to a destructive relationship to the environment.

Tours depart Fort Mason Center June 5 through November 28, Saturday and Sunday (and the occasional Monday and Friday) at 8:30am. Reservations are required and trips go rain or shine. Participants are encouraged to pack their own lunch and drinks for the day-long excursion. For information, call (415) 474-3385.

A FORUM ON RECYCLING

The California Resource Recovery Association hosts its 1999 conference at Fort Mason Center this month. A nonprofit organization promoting resource conservation, the CRRA works to expand the market for recycled products, promotes sustainable policies, encourages the reuse of products, and acts as a clearinghouse for information on the recycling industry and government policies. It is the oldest such organization in the country.

The conference kicks off June 6, Sunday at 10am with a walking tour of Fort Mason, followed by a ferry ride to Angel Island and an annual member meeting with picnic and barbecue from 1 to 5pm.

Things really get going Monday through Wednesday at many of Fort Mason Center's conference facilities. Scheduled keynote speakers are ecologist Paul Ehrlich, the Environmental Protection Agency's Regional Administrator Felicia Marcus, and former governor Jerry Brown's Deputy Secretary for Environmental Affairs Winston Hickox.

Each day offers a large selection of workshops and lectures to attend, divided into six categories: Collection Options; Organic Waste; Community Economic Development; Climate Change; Marketing and Outreach; and Collegiate and School Recycling. Day tours on Wednesday head into the neighborhoods and across the Bay to see recycling and creative reuse ideas in action.

The 23rd annual CRRA Conference takes place June 6 through 9, Sunday through Wednesday from 10am to 5pm in the Herbst Pavilion, Cowell Theater, and Buildings A and C. Cost is $375 per person. For information, call (916) 441-2772 or visit www.CRRA.com.

SWING ON

Swing dancing returns to Fort Mason Center as dance instructor Diana Castillo resumes her popular classes, voted "Best Place to Learn Swing-Jitterbug" by North Beach Now!

Castillo teaches City/Street Swing, also called Retro Swing or East Coast Style. Whatever the name, participants learn boogie-woogie, jump, jive, and even the Charleston and some Lindy Hop.

There are three classes for different levels and ages. Whether you take the Teen Swing Class, Beginning Swing-Jitterbug, or Intermediate Lindy Hop, Castillo adds variations, combines moves, and helps you learn leading and following techniques.

Swing has enjoyed a widespread revival in the past few years, with San Francisco establishing itself as a center for the latest retro craze. Castillo, however, is no newcomer to the Swing world. She has more than two decades of experience, and has taught at Fort Mason Center for nearly a decade. Her classes offer a relaxed, informal session and, best of all, you don't need to bring a partner to participate.

Swing/Jitterbug classes are held every Wednesday in Landmark Building C. Teen Swing is at 6pm, Beginning at 7pm, and Intermediate at 8pm. Cost is $40 for four sessions. For information, call (510) 549-3591.

GARY SNYDER SPEAKS

Beat poet Gary Snyder appears on stage in conversation with actor Peter Coyote to celebrate the recent release of the Gary Snyder Reader. Winner of the 1975 Pulitzer Prize for his poem Turtle Island, Snyder is—along with Allen Ginsberg and Jack Kerouac—one of the best known figures of the Beat movement of the 1950s. He published his first collection of poetry in 1959, much of it based on his experiences working in the Sierras or hitchhiking with Ginsberg. His poems also reflect his lifelong study of Zen Buddhism.

The Gary Snyder Reader collects the essays, travel journals, letters, poems, and translations of this 20th-century literary great. It documents Snyder's five decades as poet, activist, and reluctant guru of the counterculture. Following his talk with fellow Buddhist Coyote, Snyder reads from his new book.

Peter Coyote's recent book, Sleeping Where I Fall, is an autobiographical account of the sixties.

Gary Snyder appears in conversation on June 2, Wednesday at 8pm at the Cowell Theater. Tickets are $13.50. For information, call (415) 441-6670.

FROM AFRICA TO THE CARIBBEAN

In two new shows opening this month, the San Francisco Craft and Folk Art Museum focuses on African and African-influenced artistic traditions on two continents. From textiles throughout sub-Saharan Africa to religious artifacts from Haiti, these exhibits highlight an amazing diversity of aesthetic styles.

Fiber Eloquence: African Traditions
Drawing on many public and private collections from around the United States—primarily New Orleans, Brooklyn, and the Bay Area—the Museum presents a display of beautiful textile designs of stunning color and intensity.

Clothing often is used to denote a person's standing in society, and African garments are no exception. The wearer's status, age, and ethnic identity is immediately communicated to anyone familiar with the culture. The exhibit draws on many of the diverse regions of Africa, including magnificent gowns from Cameroon worn by the Fon (king) and raffia caps worn by the Kuba elders of the Congo. Like our own, the clothing on display shows the values of African societies, from social and ritual contexts to the importance of the textile arts.

Recycled Riches, Recycled Dreams: The Altars of Pierrot Barra
Caribbean art can be understood with a passage from the poet Derek Walcott's book The Antilles: Fragments of Epic Memory. In it, Walcott writes "Break a vase, and the love that reassembles the fragments is stronger than that love which took its symmetry for granted when it was whole." This, then, is the experience of the islands—especially Haiti—whose history is one of rupture, of breaking with the African past, of the dreaded Middle Passage, and of reassembling the pieces into a new existence.

Haitian artist and oungan (voudou priest) Pierrot Barra's work lies within the tradition described by Walcott. He assembles fragments of discarded fabrics, sequins, ribbons, broken bottles, and doll parts in what he calls "little altars"—lovingly crafted devotional objects meant to serve as personal places of worship. Quite striking is the similarity of Barra's aesthetics to the "outsider art" of African American artists in the South.

In a country with few factories and industry, most of the found items originate elsewhere, so Barra's materials fluctuate with the whims of international trade. He seeks his "inspiration" in the trash heaps behind the homes of the wealthy elite. To Barra, each find is not the result of luck or coincidence, but the result of divine guidance. Even the arrival of customers at his workshop is divinely arranged.

"Fiber Eloquence: African Traditions" and "Recycled Riches, Recycled Dreams: The Altars of Pierrot Barra" run from June 5 through August 8 at the San Francisco Craft and Folk Art Museum in Landmark Building A. The Museum is open Tuesday through Sunday from 11am to 5pm (Saturdays 10am to 5pm). Admission is $3, $5 for families, and $1 for seniors. Admission is free every Saturday from 10am to noon. An opening reception (free admission) takes place June 9, Wednesday from 5 to 7pm.

The Museum also presents two related programs this month. Families are invited to participate in a textile-making workshop inspired by "Fiber Eloquence" on June 13, Sunday from 2 to 4pm. Admission is $5 per person, and reservations are recommended. Guest curator Ellen Werner gives a free tour of that exhibit on June 19, Saturday at 11am. For information on shows and programs, call (415) 775-0990.
